

Dyslexia Center News

This fall the Center will gain 5 more Dell computers from a grant from fees generated from the student technology fees. These computers will be stationed in our testing area for student use during testing or for students to use that prefer a quieter area for studying. These grants have enabled the Center to have a current and more up-to-date computer lab for student use.

College Readiness

At this time, many high school graduates are making plans for college in the fall. Many of these plans must be delayed or changed because potential students have failed to follow up on the many forms and requirements for entrance into a chosen college or university. Now is the time to be in touch with the institution to make sure that all ACT scores, high school transcripts, fees, and required forms have been submitted and reached the school of choice. The admissions office is the best place to begin when checking for requirements in to a school.

Creative Scholars Camp

Plans for our summer camp set for July 14-July 18, 2009 are well underway. Along with the multi sensory instruction, the directors have new plans for both day and night campers. Registration packets should have been sent by now. For more information, call Rhonda at (985)448-4214.

Camp Activities

This year's camp will include the usual swimming, art projects and science experiments/activities, but the Aqua Van from the Aquarium of the Americas and the Discovery Dome portable planetarium will also be offered for the campers. There will also be team and self-esteem building activities.
